Anat Ronen is a muralist, a graphic designer, a web designer, and illustrator and a painter. until recently, she used her talents for private purposes only, but in 2009, Anat went public on a big way with four murals on the Galveston Causeway, each 90 feet long. She has since completed several other large and smaller scale murals on public spaces and in private homes throughout the Houston area. Two of her largest public work pieces can be found right next to Minute Maid Park ("the Venom mural", 120' long x 20' - 30' high) and on Main Street and Tuam, by mid town Houston ("Nouveau Antique Art Bar", 77' long x 14' high). A native of Israel, Anat has now established her home in Houston, TX with her husband and son. They are very happy to live in such a diverse, growing, friendly and active city. Anat works alone with technical assistance from her husband, Ori.

Anat paints in acrylics, pastels, watercolors, charcoal, latex paint and has a diverse portfolio - from digital medium (website and graphic design) to mixed media (hand-made illustrations scanned and digitally manipulated) to traditional canvases and murals. Every project is an opportunity to create new ways to achieve a result everyone is happy with. Her primary drive is to be original, so projects always start from scratch. She listens to the needs, learns about the clients and combines all the ingredients to make a satisfactory result.

Her past in business administration and marketing is useful when it comes to design - she has the ability to think like the business owner and at the same time, put herself in the client's shoes and understand what type of design would work best. Anat is very thankful for her talents and for her ability to make a living from what she loves.
